PART ONE INTRODUCTION

CHAPTER 1 PURPOSE, SCOPE, AND FORMAT

1.1. Purpose and Scope

a. This manual provides all published order of battle (OB) information on the Aggressor Armed Forces as of 31 January 1963. It is intended for use in developing Aggressor order of battle data for training exercises and as an aid to training in order of battle intelligence. Master files containing complete OB on all Aggressor units are prepared and maintained by the U.S. Army Aggressor Center, USCONARC, Fort Riley, Kans.

b. Personnel using this manual are expected to apply the principles and techniques used in the production and dissemination of order of battle intelligence (FM 30-19). They should also be familiar with the contents of FM 30-101, FM 30-101-1, FM 30-102, and other publications concerned with the employment of Aggressor as a maneuver enemy.

c. Changes to this order of battle manual will be published as changes in the Aggressor Armed Forces occur.

d. Users of this manual are encouraged to submit recommended changes or comments to improve the manual. Comments should be keyed to the specific page, paragraph, and line of the text in which the change is recommended. Reasons should be provided for each comment to insure understanding and complete evaluation. Comments should be forwarded directly to Headquarters, U.S. Army Aggressor Center, USCONARC, Fort Riley, Kans.

1.2. Format

The order of battle information in this manual is presented in four parts, consisting of an explanation of the organization of this manual and background on the Aggressor nation and its military history, identified ground organizations, identified air and naval organizations, and reference data.

a. Part One, Introduction.

(1) Purpose and scope (ch. 1).

(2) General (ch. 2). Information in this chapter consists of several definitions, the basic elements of Aggressor order of battle and their usage, types of units and the designation system employed, and notes on the use of this manual.

(3) History of the aggressor nation (ch. 3). This chapter depicts establishment of the Aggressor nation, its political, social, and economic structure, the origin and development of the armed forces, development of paramilitary forces, and Aggressor's military campaigns.

b. Part Two, Identified Ground Organizations.

(1) Major ground units (ch. 4). These include all identified regional commands, army groups, armies, and divisions. Unit designations, commanders and key staff officers, locations, code names, code numbers, and unit histories are indicated for units of each echelon. For divisions, additional data is listed which consists of identified subordinate units and, if known, the commanders and code numbers.

(2) Other ground units (chs. 5 and 6). Army ground units smaller than division size are listed by branch of service under two main headings, ground units—line divisions and ground units

—army and GHQ. The line divisional units with respective parent organization of each, if known, are listed in chapter 5. Such information as the commander and code number of each divisional unit, when known, may be found under the parent organization in chapter 4. Army and GHQ units are listed in chapter 6.

c. Part Three, Identified Air Force and Naval Organizations.

- (1) Major air force units (ch. 7). These include all identified Aggressor air armies, corps and divisions. Unit designations, commanders and key staff officers, locations, code names, code numbers, and unit histories are indicated for units of each echelon. For divisions, additional data is listed which consists of identified subordinate units and, if known, the commanders and code numbers.
- (2) Other air force and naval units (ch. 8). Units smaller than division size are listed by type of unit under three headings, air force divisional flying units, air force nondivisional units, and naval units. Subordination of known units, in keeping with the system employed for the listing of ground units, may be found in section I for divisional flying units, in section II for nondivisional units, and in section III for naval units.

d. Part Four, Reference Data.

- (1) Location of major organizations of the Aggressor Armed Forces (ch. 9). This chapter contains the last known location of major identified organizations of the Aggressor Armed Forces. Aggressor units of division size and larger identified in the homeland are listed under the army group area in which they are located; those located overseas are listed under the appropriate occupation areas.
- (2) Code names (ch. 10). This chapter contains a compilation of unit code names shown elsewhere in this manual.
- (3) Code numbers (ch. 11). This chapter contains a list of Aggressor unit code numbers. Only the code numbers which have been identified with an organization are listed.
- (4) Roster of Aggressor officers (ch. 12). This chapter contains an alphabetical roster of identified commanders and key staff officers of the Aggressor Armed Forces. When known, data on age, rank, date of rank, branch, present assignment, previous assignments, schools attended, decorations and awards, and campaign ribbons are included.

GENERAL

2.1. Definitions

a. Home Command. Composed of those ground and air force elements designated as the strategic reserves, the HEJMKOMANDO is directly subordinate to the Ministry of the Armed Forces. It is responsible for training all newly inducted army and air force personnel, advanced military schooling, and the general defense of the Aggressor homeland. Elements of the strategic reserves may be transferred to the regional commands or army groups to replace units which have been withdrawn for reorganization, refitting, or retraining.

b. Regional Command. May be organized to control operations in a particular area and consists of two or more army groups. The regional command is directly subordinate to the Ministry of the Armed Forces.

c. Army Group. Normally consists of four combined arms armies, a tank army, an air army, two gun artillery divisions, a breakthrough artillery division, an artillery brigade (heavy), a guided missile artillery division (medium), a guided missile artillery brigade (heavy), a free rocket artillery brigade, two antitank artillery brigades, a surface-to-air missile brigade, two antiaircraft artillery brigades, and army group support units. The army group, unless part of a regional command, is directly subordinate to the Ministry of the Armed Forces.

d. Military District. An administrative subdivision of the Aggressor homeland in which the military district headquarters performs assigned functions as a territorial command and as a training headquarters under the HEJMKOMANDO (Home Command).

e. Code Number. A number arbitrarily allotted to each unit having a separate identity such as a division, the organic units of a division, and separate nondivisional units. Code numbers are also allotted to the major elements of brigades and larger organizations. These numbers are permanently assigned to each unit.

f. Code Name. An identifying name given to regional commands, army groups, armies, divisions, and separate (nondivisional) brigades.

2.2. Elements of Aggressor Order of Battle

a. General. The basic elements of the order of battle of the Aggressor Armed Forces are presented in this manual in a series of compilations designed to provide cross-references or guides to assist in the identification of units. Aids used in determining the identification of units of the Aggressor Armed Forces are the unit designation, commander's name, code name, and code number. For example, an Aggressor soldier during proper interrogation may refer to his unit, the 96th Motorized Rifle Regiment, by its official designation (the 96th Motorized Rifle Regiment), by the commander's name (the JUGOVICH Unit), or by the code number (the 15606 unit). The use of various listings in determining Aggressor order of battle is discussed in b through d below.

b. Commander's Name.

(1) General. The names of commanders are useful to identify units. Personal names have been used informally to designate regional commands, army groups, armies, and divisions, as well as task forces, regiments, battalions, and companies. Frequently, even platoons and squads are referred to by the leader's name. Personal names of commanders in the Aggressor Armed Forces are often used in diaries, notebooks, personal and official mail, and prisoner of war interrogations.

(2) Example. A captured document refers to a unit as the "VALLEJO Unit," and a prisoner of war states that he is a member of a reconnaissance unit commanded by "Commandant VALLEJO." The roster of Aggressor officers identifies Commandant VALLEJO as the last known commander of the 315th Fusilier Reconnaissance Battalion.

c. Code Names.

- (1) General. Code names are assigned to regional commands, army groups, armies, divisions, and separate (non-divisional) brigades. All organic units of a separate (nondivisional) brigade or division share the code name of the parent unit. Nondivisional units, other than brigades, use the code name of the unit to which they are assigned. Experience indicates that code names of major organizations are usually permanent. Separate (nondivisional) units, other than brigades, however, change code names whenever their assignment or attachment is changed. Code names are usually single words, and are selected under no identifiable system. For security reasons, Aggressor units in the field are frequently referred to by code name only.
- (2) Example. A captured Aggressor document may refer to the PATRIOTO Unit. Since Aggressor units are often referred to by the name of the commander, both the roster of Aggressor officers and the list of code names should be checked. The roster of officers does not contain an officer named PATRIOTO, but the list of code names indicates that PATRIOTO is the code name of the 33d Tank Division. Therefore, the unit to which the captured document refers is the 33d Tank Division.

d. Code Numbers.

- (1) General. Code numbers are permanently assigned to each unit. They are normally used on unit rosters to save time in their preparation. However, unit commanders while in combat frequently use these code numbers as a deceptive measure by switching around the code designations of their subordinate units for a specific operation. Using this method, the Aggressor commander normally has his attack well underway by the time units have been reidentified. He may also use a time pattern wherein units change numbers according to a prearranged time schedule. (Using this method, the number is always prefaced by the time of transmission.)

- (2) Code numbering system. The Aggressor High Command has allotted a block of code numbers to each major component of the Aggressor Armed Forces. It appears that code numbers in 00001, 10000, 20000, 30000, and 50000 series are assigned to the Army High Command, the 40000 series to the Air Forces High Command, and the 60000 series to the Navy High Command. However, there does not appear to be an established sequence for the assignment of a series or block of code numbers to the various types of units.
- (3) Example. The code number 15606 is disclosed by a prisoner of war. Reference to the list of code numbers determines that the code number 15606 is assigned to the 96th Motorized Rifle Regiment.

e. Postal Designation System. Mail addresses utilize a combination of unit designation and/or code numbers and code names coupled with area designations. Generally units below division level use their actual designation, division level units use code numbers, and units of larger size code names.

Examples.

- Hq Co, 29 Mtz Rfl Regt (22150) BALAI, GOLFO, ATLANTIKO, is Hq Co, 29 Mtz Rfl Regt, 36 Mtz Rfl Div, 5 Army, Army Gp GOLFO, Atlantic Area.
- AAMG Co, 402 AAA Bn (Sep) MIRABILA, GOLFO, ATLANTIKO, is AAMG Co, 402 AAA Bn (Sep), 1 Tk Army, Army Gp GOLFO, Atlantic Area.
- Hq Co, FRONTSULKO, MARTELO, is Hq Co, 34 Army, Army Gp ORIENTO, Homeland.

2.3. Types of Units and Designation System

a. Army High Command.

(1) Types of units.

- (a) Aggressor ground units are identifiable by the branch or other special designation in the title.

Example. 1 Tank Army, 9 Tank Division, 342 Reconnaissance Battalion. For types of Aggressor Army units, see FM 30-102.

- (b) The term "fusilier", a designation of elite troops, is awarded to any type unit below army group level (except airborne, already considered elite), which distinguishes itself in battle. "Fusilier" is used in combination with the name of the type unit so designated.

Example. 11 Fusilier Tank Army, 4 Fusilier Motorized Rifle Division, and 31 Fusilier Tank Division. Fusilier units below division level are frequently designated with the letter F, e.g., 202 F Mtz Rfl Regt.

- (2) Designation system. Both Esperanto and English are used in the designation system (app. I). The use of Esperanto increases the realism and improves intelligence training. A certain pattern is noticeable in the numbering of Aggressor ground units, although no rule has been established that applies in all cases. Many exceptions are evident as a result of inactivation, conversion to other types of units, for other less common reasons, or for no apparent reason at all. When military symbols are used for regional commands, army groups, and armies, the unit designation appears inside the symbol block.

- (a) Home command. The Aggressor Home Command (HEJMKOMANDO) is so designated in Esperanto, the official language of Aggressor. See figure 2 and appendix I, a, b, c.

- (b) Regional commands. There are two known regional commands in the Aggressor Armed Forces. These are designated by the region name in Esperanto as Regional Command ATLANTIKO and Regional Command PACIFIKO (figs. 1 and 7, and app. I, a, b, c).

- (c) Army groups. Known army groups are designated by the area name in Esperanto as Army Group NORDO, SUDO, ORIENTO, OKCIDENTO, KARIBO, GOLFO, ST. LAURENCO, KALIFORNIO, KOLOMBIO, and AZIO. See figures 1, 3 through 6, 8 through 14, and appendix I.

Example.

XXXXX

- (d) Armies. Armies are designated by Arabic numerals or spelled out in conjunction with the following systems:

1. Combined arms army. Combined arms armies numbers are believed to run from 1 through 38; however, not all numbers have been identified. Combined arms armies are frequently referred to without using the words "combined arms," e.g., 5th Army.

Example.

COMB

2. Tank army. Tank armies are believed to be numbered in a series from 1 through 16; however, not all numbers have been identified. Tank armies are referred to by using the word "tank," e.g., 3d Tank Army.

Example.

TK

- (e) Divisions. All divisions are designated by Arabic numerals and branch or type of equipment. Each type division is numbered in its own series beginning with the number 1, except breakthrough artillery divisions and gun artillery divisions. Breakthrough and gun artillery divisions are numbered in the same series, e.g., the 5th Breakthrough Artillery Division has been identified; therefore, there cannot be a 5th Gun Artillery Division.

- (f) Brigades. All brigades are designated by Arabic numerals and branch or type of equipment.

Examples.

19 Hv Gun Bde (203mm), 5 Brkth Arty Div

201 Mixed Arty Bde, 1 Tk Army

34 Engr Bde, Army Gp NORDO

- (g) Regiments. All regiments are designated by Arabic numerals and branch, mission or type of equipment.

Examples.

141 Mtz Rfl Regt, 30 Mtz Rfl Div

903 Army Cml Regt, 7 Army

501 Sig Regt, Army Gp KALIFORNIO

- (h) Battalions. All battalions are designated by Arabic numerals and/or by branch, mission or type of equipment.

Examples.

1 Mtz Rfl Bn, 545 Mtz Rfl Regt

2 Mdm Tk Bn, 280 Mdm Tk Regt

Mdm Tk Bn, 545 Mtz Rfl Regt

AAA Bn, 545 Mtz Rfl Regt

38 Prcht Rfl Bn, 18 Abn Prcht Regt

188 Sig Bn, 71 Tk Div

4 Ski Bn, Army Gp KOLOMBIO

73 Pgnd Bn, Army Gp GOLFO

- (i) Companies, batteries, and troops. All companies, batteries, and troops are designated by Arabic numerals and/or branch, mission or type of equipment.

Examples.

1 Mtz Rfl Co, 3 Mtz Rfl Bn, 141 Mtz Rfl Regt

Hq & Svc Co, 3 Mtz Rfl Bn, 141 Mtz Rfl Regt

Hq & Svc Btry, 504 Mixed Arty Bde

Rcl Rfl Co, 141 Mtz Rfl Regt

915 Pgnd Co, 20 Army

- (j) Platoons. All platoons are designated by Arabic numerals and/or branch, mission or type of equipment.

Examples.

3 Rfl Plat, 1 Abn Rfl Co, 1 Abn Rfl Bn (Prcht), 18 Abn Prcht Regt

MG Plat, 1 Abn Rfl Co, 1 Abn Rfl Bn (Prcht), 18 Abn Prcht Regt

Hq Plat, 1 Abn Rfl Co, 1 Abn Rfl Bn (Prcht), 18 Abn Prcht Regt

b. Air Force High Command.

- (1) Types of units. All Aggressor air force units are identifiable by the type of aircraft in the title. For types of Aggressor air units see FM 30-102.

- (2) Assignment. Experience indicates that the assignment of air divisions and corps is changed more frequently than for ground divisions. It is believed that control of all nondivisional aviation units have been centralized within the Air Force High Command and that these units are detached to subordinate organizations for specific missions, both in the homeland and in oversea areas.

- (3) Designation system. A certain pattern is noticeable in the numbering of Aggressor air units, but no rule can be established that is applicable in all cases. Many exceptions are indicated as a result of inactivation, conversion to other type units, for other less common reasons, or for no apparent reason at all.

- (a) Armies. Armies are designated by Arabic numerals, for instance, "6th Air Army."

- (b) Corps. Corps are designated in a continuing series of Arabic numerals regardless of type. For example, if there is a 10th Fighter-Ground Attack Corps, there cannot be a 10th Bomber Corps.

- (c) Divisions. Divisions are designated by Arabic numerals and mission. They are generally numbered in the series 1-100, without regard to the type of division.

- (d) Nondivisional units. Nondivisional units seem to follow no pattern in their numbering.

2.4. Use of This Manual

For identification of abbreviations and Aggressor symbols used, see AR 320-50, FM 21-30, and appendix I of this manual.

HISTORY OF THE AGGRESSOR NATION

a. The Aggressor nation arose out of the chaotic conditions which characterized many areas of the world at the end of World War II. The collapse and surrender of the Axis Powers was followed by large-scale withdrawals of Allied troops from the areas of recent conflict. Such withdrawals produced almost immediately a military and political vacuum. Into this situation stepped a small group of unscrupulous and ambitious men, determined to seize control over these torn, unsettled areas and to use them as a springboard for the eventual conquest of the entire world. To attain their objective, they created a totalitarian political organization known as the "Circle Trigon Party," based upon the political theories of a nineteenth century radical, Akilo Petrovansi. Its nucleus, the Central Committee, comprised the party leadership. The Central Committee, in turn, elected a triumvirate to serve at the helm of the party. After a difficult struggle, the Triumvirate gained uncontested control within the Central Committee and exercised absolute power within the Circle Trigon Party.

b. By late 1945, the leaders of the party had established the Aggressor nation. During the winter of 1945-46, they proceeded to consolidate their position in the large land mass of the Aggressor homeland. They placed their trusted lieutenants in all key governmental positions so that the government, in effect, was completely controlled by the party leadership. Control over the government, in turn, enabled the party to exercise a firm grip on the fledgling armed forces of the new nation. Party and government control also extended to industry and commerce, agriculture, organized labor, the media of information, the arts and sciences, and the field of education. By the summer of 1946, the Triumvirate, through its various organs of control, dominated every walk of life within the Aggressor nation.

3.2. Political, Social, and Economic Structure

a. Form of Government.

- (1) The titular head of the Aggressor nation is the President. He is elected by the single-chamber legislature, the "Chamber of Councilors," but actually handpicked by the Triumvirate. The presidency is invariably handed to a veteran Circle Trigonist, who has no governmental powers and merely represents the nation at official and ceremonial functions.
- (2) The chief executive of the government is the Minister President, who is nominated by the President. The actual selection is made by the Triumvirate and dictated to the President. Approval of the appointment by the legislature, as required by the Aggressor constitution, is a formality. The Minister President is usually a high-ranking member of the party's Central Committee. During recent years, he has performed a dual role as chief executive and member of the Triumvirate. He selects the members of his cabinet or ministers as directed by the Triumvirate. Except for a small number of experts, all cabinet ministers and key personnel of the various ministries are members or candidates of the party's Central Committee or hold high rank at the national level of the Circle Trigon Party.
- (3) The Aggressor constitution vests legislative powers in the aforementioned Chamber of Councilors. The legislature, however, is convened infrequently. Actual legislative powers are exercised by the Triumvirate and Central Committee through their representatives in the government. During the infrequent sessions of the legislature, new legislation is submitted by the members of the government and rubber-stamped by the Chamber of Councilors.

- (4) The judiciary at the national level is appointed by the Minister President as directed by the Triumvirate. Since it enjoys no independence, it can be employed to further the political ends of the state, such as giving judicial approval to purging political enemies of the Circle Trigon Party. Trial by jury is unknown. Trials may be held in secret "in the interests of national security."
- (5) Governmental control is highly centralized. Certain key ministries control every segment of the nation's economic and manpower resources within their area of responsibility. The Ministries for Light and Heavy Industry, for instance, control the nation's industrial output and channel a large percentage into the military effort. The Ministry of Internal Affairs, in addition to its conventional functions, exercises police power, controls the security forces, and operates forced labor camps and penal colonies throughout the nation.
- (6) Local government reflects the structure of the national government, except in instances where powers are reserved exclusively to the national government. Local governmental officials are either furnished or controlled by the local leaders of the Circle Trigon Party.
- (7) Functions of government at any level are marked by impressive ritual. A prominent display of uniforms, Circle Trigon banners, and similar trappings can be viewed at any government or party-sponsored ceremony. Speeches and slogans, proclaiming "Peace," "Democracy," "The rights of the people," and "Loyalty to the ideals of the party," can be heard and seen throughout the homeland. The Triumvirate uses such trappings and propaganda to arouse nationalism among the people, and to deceive them with respect to the true political and military objectives of the regime.

b. The Circle Trigon Party.

- (1) Although there is no clear dividing line between the party and government, it must be emphasized that the party is the true source of power. It ruthlessly pursues its main objectives of internal consolidation and world domination. To attain the former, the party employs brute force, exploits age-old traditions and nationalistic feelings, offers blandishments, and instills fear and distrust in the Aggressor people. In aiming for world domination, Aggressor wages military campaigns, preceded by political and economic penetration.
- (2) The Circle Trigon Party of the homeland controls the activities of the Circle Trigon Parties of other nations in furtherance of its political and military objectives. The homeland party expects its sister parties to profess loyalty and strict adherence to the homeland "party line." Circle Trigonist dissenters at home and abroad are disciplined or purged.
- (3) In the homeland, membership in the Circle Trigon Party is confined to a hard core of party stalwarts, amounting to no more than 5 percent of the total population. The populace, however, is thoroughly indoctrinated with the Aggressor political philosophy and supports it by reason of fear or conviction. Members of the Triumvirate and other Circle Trigonist "heroes" are admired and often idolized. Particular reverence is shown to Akilo Petrovansi, whose political theories form the basis for the Circle Trigon movement.
- (4) Lately, the Triumvirate, because of interparty struggles and some economic unrest, has modified its harsh regime and made some concessions to the populace. Another factor which may have contributed to the adoption of a softer policy was the death, in 1955, of Emilio Grandafrato, formerly the ruling member of the Triumvirate and virtual dictator of the Aggressor nation. The power struggle within the Central Committee that followed Grandafrato's death resulted in the final emergence of Vasily Krostychovic as the new strong man. Although Krostychovic was a strict party line man, he attempted to convince the free world that it had nothing to fear from the economic and military expansion of the Aggressor nation.

c. The Aggressor People.

- (1) The population of the Aggressor homeland had surpassed the two hundred million mark in 1960. Since then, the growth of the population has continued because of the increasing birth rate and the acquisition of new territory.
- (2) Although the Aggressor people comprise a large variety of ethnic and religious groups, the national objectives proclaimed by their rulers have instilled into them a unity of purpose. Another unifying element was the adoption of Esperanto as the official language. Although Esperanto has not fully supplanted the native tongues of the local areas, it is expected to do so in the course of a few generations.
- (3) All religious sects and denominations enjoy almost complete religious freedom, as long as their religious beliefs conform with the principles laid down by the party. Religious bodies at home are largely subservient to the party and government. Religious organizations abroad often unknowingly serve as a vehicle for infiltrating Circle Trigonist agents into foreign nations.

d. Economic Structure.

- (1) The Aggressor economy is completely controlled by the state. All industrial and commercial establishments are state-owned and private individuals are prohibited from owning any means of production or distribution. Collectives and state-controlled cooperatives dominate the agricultural field. Farmers, however, may own small plots of ground in order to raise agricultural products for their own use.

- (2) Industrial and commercial facilities are either manufacturing or transporting implements of war or else can be converted to support the war effort at short notice. The Aggressor civil air fleet, for example, is under quasi-military control and, in case of military necessity, can be diverted to the armed forces. Practically all passenger and cargo aircraft conform to military standards and specifications, so that transfer from civilian to military usage poses no problem. Tractors used in agriculture and commercial trucks can be similarly converted for military usage.
- (3) Stockpiling of strategic materials also serves to promote the Aggressor war effort. Although the armed forces control and maintain their own central storage depots in the various military districts of the homeland, they can draw on the reserves of the civilian economy. Such reserves, known as "state reserves" and administered by a civilian agency, comprise large stockpiles of food products, petroleum, coal and coke, strategic metals, tools and instruments, chemicals, heavy industrial equipment and various means of transportation.
- (4) In addition to military supplies and state reserves, Aggressor maintains industrial mobilization reserves at each industrial plant and factory. These reserves, consisting of machine tools, raw materials and semifinished goods, insure the uninterrupted operation of the munitions industry during war and speed up the conversion of other industries to war production.
- (5) To maintain and increase the war-making potential of the Aggressor economy, the government supports a huge research and development program. Recent Aggressor advances in space, the production of nuclear materials and weapons, guided and ballistic missiles, and electronics equipment attest to the success of this program. They also serve notice that Aggressor has attained at least parity in these fields with the United States of America.

e. Manpower Policies.

- (1) Aggressor holds that the personal aspirations of the individual must be subservient to the interests of the state. Consequently, the government exploits each individual in order to advance the Aggressor economy and promote the Aggressor war effort.
- (2) The nation's manpower has been registered and graded by mental and physical profiles. Persons of high mental caliber are sent to state-supported educational institutions where they are trained to fill key positions in governmental agencies, universities, scientific laboratories, and industrial plants. This so-called "intelligentsia" is accorded an honored role in Aggressor society and competes for the highest social positions with party functionaries, government bureaucrats and high ranking army officers.
- (3) A high percentage of the nation's best manpower is channelled into the regular military establishment. Numerous military preparatory schools accept cadets at an early age. An important criterion for selection is the loyalty of the cadet's family to the Circle Trigon Party.
- (4) All young men and unmarried women are subject to military service for a period of three years. Most of the inductees have acquired some military skills, such as the firing of small arms, in Circle Trigonist youth organizations and other paramilitary societies. Exemption is granted to most university students, persons possessing certain technical skills in industry and agriculture, and the physically unfit. The latter, however, are required to serve their period of conscription in labor battalions or similar regimented organizations. Women inducted into the armed forces perform clerical and housekeeping functions, or serve in the various technical and administrative services, e.g., signal, medical, and intendance. All other unmarried and many married women work in industry, commerce and agriculture, where they perform duties ranging from hard menial labor to highly specialized functions.

- (5) Political reliability and loyalty to the Circle Trigon Party are criteria for service in the armed forces and other than menial positions in industry, commerce, and agriculture. Persons known to be actively or passively opposed to the party are arrested by the Security Police, subjected to secret trials, and sentenced to terms in forced labor camps or penal colonies. The exploitation of forced labor greatly contributes to maintaining the Aggressor economy at its present level.

3.3. Origin and Development of the Aggressor Armed Forces

a. General. The Armed Forces came into being immediately upon the establishment of the Aggressor nation. Disbanded troops of many nations which had participated in World War II hastened to join the Aggressor military and were utilized as a well-balanced professional cadre. Among them were many experienced military leaders who were given positions of responsibility corresponding to their former rank and status.

b. Aggressor Ground Forces.

- (1) Since their inception, the Aggressor ground forces have expanded rapidly and gone through various reorganizations in order to increase their operational flexibility, mobility, and firepower. The first reorganization took place during the years 1952-53. This reorganization witnessed a departure from the centralization of control which had hamstrung commanders at the lower levels. Rifle divisions, for example, received organic tank and other support elements and were thus able to fight independently over longer periods of time. In essence, this was a vote of confidence for commanders of divisions and divisional units by the Aggressor High Command. The reorganization of 1952-53 was also marked by the introduction of new weapons and equipment with a corresponding increase in firepower and mobility. Horsedrawn transport was largely discarded, but the horse cavalry survived.

- (2) The second reorganization of 1955-57 was primarily designed to ready the Aggressor ground forces for commitment on the nuclear battlefield. Line divisions were streamlined organizationally and provided with new weapons and equipment. The retained, however, their triangular structure and were subsequently referred to as "tritomic" divisions. GHQ units were also revamped and, in some instances, dropped. Tactical artillery and anti-aircraft missile units were activated and placed into service. Horse cavalry divisions were dismounted and reorganized into more mobile divisions.
- (3) The third reorganization during the period 1958-60, was designed to modernize and increase the strength and combat capability of the armed forces. The following major changes resulted: Regional commands were created; army groups were reorganized; mechanized and rifle armies were replaced respectively by tank and combined arms armies. New divisions and armies were created as the ground forces expanded. The corps echelon in the ground forces was eliminated, except for airborne corps, which are organized as needed. Rifle divisions were converted to mechanized divisions; mountain divisions were organized as needed; missile divisions were created; and tank divisions were reorganized to increase their combat effectiveness. Tactical air ground support units were reequipped with high-performance jet aircraft and helicopter units were activated and assigned to the various air armies.

- (4) The fourth reorganization took place during 1961-62. The most significant change occurred in Aggressor's artillery weapons structure. Greater flexibility and increased firepower resulted from changes in organization and equipment. Missile and rocket units were given a more prominent role in Aggressor's artillery capability. In the army group, conventional antiaircraft artillery was reduced and surface-to-air missile units were added. Signal and engineer strength was increased. The mechanized rifle divisions were reorganized as motorized rifle divisions.

c. Aggressor Air Force and Navy. The development of the army, by virtue of its numerical strength, had the most far-reaching effect. However, the Aggressor air elements directly subordinate to the Ministry of the Armed Forces, and the Aggressor navy, made equally significant advances. Aggressor tactical air armies were reorganized and streamlined, resulting in a reduction of personnel and aircraft. The fighter, the bomber and the attack corps, divisions, and regiments were reorganized into light bomber and fighter/ground attack corps, divisions, and regiments. The navy continued to expand and modernize its submarine arm, and added nuclear powered submarines capable of launching intermediate range ballistic missiles while submerged. It also commissioned additional surface-combat craft, including missile ships. These developments enhanced the status of the Aggressor air force and navy within the overall military organization. However, the Army remains the dominant service.

d. Political Weaknesses.

- (1) Aggressor has made great strides in perfecting the organization and weapons systems of his armed forces, and in training the individual soldier. These improvements, however, are accompanied by certain weaknesses which are inherent to any totalitarian society. The watchful eye of the party over the armed forces, as manifested by the system of political officers, is repugnant to many commanders and their troops. Many of the former, while paying lip service to the "party line" are perfunctory Circle Trigonists. They resent the many party tasks that detract from their professional development and private life. Yet, they dutifully teach the "party line" to the rank and file.

- (2) The distrust which the party holds for the military is manifested by the system of informers it has created within the armed forces. It is also reflected by the isolation in which Aggressor troops are held when stationed outside of the homeland. Finally, while centralized control has been greatly relaxed, the initiative of commanders and troops is more rigidly restricted than that of their counterparts in a free society.
- (3) The impressive advances which the individual Aggressor soldier has made in improving his professional knowledge and in acquiring new technical skills mark him as a formidable opponent. On the other hand, bondage so restricts his freedom of action and quickness of decision that it may mean the difference between victory and defeat on the battlefield.

3.4. The Development of Aggressor Paramilitary Forces

a. A prominent feature of most totalitarian societies is the existence of a dual military apparatus. In the past, totalitarian powers have refused to rely solely on the regular military establishment. Instead, they have activated military groups fanatically loyal to the ruling party and not subject to control by the armed forces. In the Aggressor nation, these forces are known as Security Forces.

b. The security forces are controlled by the Ministry of Internal Affairs. They guard the borders of the homeland, maintain internal security within the homeland and in occupied areas, protect important government, party, and industrial buildings, and guard political prisoners. As the ultimate defenders of the regime, they provide the force necessary to insure the internal stability of the homeland and to suppress uprisings by any segment of the populace.

c. The emphasis which Aggressor places on military training is reflected in the many organizations designed to prepare young men and women for military service in the armed forces. Most of these are connected with the Circle Trigon Youth Organization. Were a foreign army to invade the homeland, these organizations could be expected to furnish auxiliaries to the regular armed forces and the security forces.

d. In addition to using regularly organized forces to achieve his goal of world domination, Aggressor makes maximum use of irregular operations as an adjunct to conventional operations inside and outside his homeland. For terms and definitions, the employment of guerrillas and partisans, and irregular forces organization, see FM 30-102.

3.5. Aggressor Campaigns

With the development of a strong military establishment supported by a productive economy, Aggressor inaugurated his ambitious plan for world domination by attacking the most powerful nation of the free world, the United States of America.

a. CAMPAIGNS OF 1946-47.

- (1) First California Campaign. In the fall of 1946, Aggressor seized the Antilles and the Panama Canal. In November 1946, an Aggressor expeditionary force passed through the canal and landed in California. The Aggressor navy was unequal to the task of protecting supply lines and the California expedition was defeated. Aggressor, however, successfully defended his bases in the Caribbean area.
- (2) First Florida Campaign. In the fall of 1947, the Aggressor Third Army launched a large-scale amphibious assault from its Caribbean bases and overran portions of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. After suffering a serious defeat, the remnants of this Aggressor force were evacuated. Individual Aggressor soldiers remained behind and, aided by Aggressor sympathizers, scattered over the entire United States. Living a clandestine existence, they became advisors and members of subversive groups and guerrilla organizations.

- (3) First St. Lawrence Campaign. In late September 1947, Aggressor launched a joint amphibious and airborne invasion across the North Atlantic. By the winter of that year, Aggressor held parts of Maine and the St. Lawrence River area.

b. CAMPAIGNS OF 1948-49.

- (1) First Tennessee-Kentucky Campaign. Aggressor continued to build up military strength in the Caribbean. Emphasis was placed on preparations for airborne invasions. During this period, Aggressor sympathizers in the United States increased. The tempo of subversive incidents increased and reached a climax in an open attack in the Tennessee-Kentucky area by a guerrilla group known as the "Green Brigade." The attack began in April 1948 as a series of raids on the supplies and weapons stored at Fort Campbell, Ky. The Green Brigade captured the airfield and laid siege to the post itself. As the United States launched an attack against these forces, Aggressor forces from the Caribbean executed a successful airborne landing in Tennessee. The U.S. Air Force, however, disrupted Aggressor air action and blocked the followup airlift. As a result the Aggressor airborne force was annihilated. The Green Brigade ceased to exist as a unit, but many of its members rejoined the Circle Trigonist underground.
- (2) First Caribbean Defense. In the spring of 1949, critical shipping losses in the Atlantic prompted the United States to launch a limited attack against Aggressor Caribbean installations. On 2 March, joint amphibious U.S. forces landed on the Island of Vieques, destroyed submarine pens there and at nearby San Juan, Puerto Rico, and then withdrew according to plan.
- (3) First Carolina Campaign. In May 1949, Aggressor executed an airborne invasion of the United States. The initial attack resulted in the seizure of Pope Air Force Base and the Fort Bragg, N.C., area by Aggressor. The arrival of strong U.S. reinforcements compelled Aggressor to withdraw.

- (4) Hawaiian Campaign. Late in May 1949, Aggressor launched an amphibious attack against the Hawaiian Islands. The United States, heavily committed in North Carolina, mustered its small garrison and hastily mobilized local National Guard units to repel the attack. These forces put up stubborn resistance, but by 19 June, Aggressor was in control of the entire island group. The United States immediately organized a joint amphibious task force, which assaulted Oahu on 25 October and completely recaptured the islands by mid-November.
- (5) First Alaskan Campaign. While in possession of the Hawaiian Islands, the Aggressor High Command decided to use them as a springboard for an Alaskan invasion. On 4 October 1949, Aggressor Task Force SCHNEE departed from Hilo, Hawaii, and made an amphibious landing in the vicinity of Anchorage, Alaska. By mid-February, Aggressor units had advanced beyond Northway. Subsequent combined operations of the U.S. and Allied forces drove Aggressor from the Alaskan mainland to bases in the Aleutian Islands.

c. CAMPAIGNS OF 1950.

- (1) Second Florida Campaign. In 1950, Aggressor renewed his attack on the continental United States. On 1 February Aggressor launched a successful airborne and amphibious invasion of Florida, after bombing U.S. military installations. Aggressor's use of the Greater Antilles chain as a base of operations against the United States mainland and against U.S. shipping sped U.S. plans for another attack on Aggressor Caribbean bases.
- (2) Second Caribbean Defense. On 15 March 1950, a joint U.S. Army-Navy task force launched another attack on Vieques, quickly overran the Aggressor defenders, destroyed glider assembly plants and submarine bases, and then withdrew according to plan.

- (3) Southeastern United States Campaign. To assist the Florida offensive, Aggressor launched a second joint airborne and amphibious attack against the United States. In March 1950, Aggressor, with complete air superiority over the Southeastern United States, landed an airborne force in the vicinity of Fort Bragg, N.C. Simultaneously, Aggressor landed an amphibious task force in the vicinity of Wilmington, N.C., and advanced towards Fort Bragg to effect a linkup with the Aggressor forces in that area. In April, the United States regained air superiority over this sector and the U.S. ground forces launched a successful counterattack. By the end of May, the remnants of the Aggressor forces which could not be evacuated had been mopped up. In the meantime, the Aggressor invasion of Florida had been stopped along the general line Jacksonville-Tallahassee-Apalachicola.
- (4) Southeast Asia Campaign. At the same time that Aggressor attempted to consolidate his position on the North American Continent, he embarked on a series of campaigns to "liberate" several of the former European colonial areas in Asia. By late April, Aggressor had seized North Vietnam, Laos, and portions of South Vietnam, and subsequently brought in his Tenth Army to serve as an occupation force.

d. CAMPAIGNS OF 1951-52.

- (1) Second Carolina Campaign. In 1951, Aggressor again attacked the United States. A reinforced mechanized army made a successful amphibious landing in the Charleston, S.C. area on 11 July 1951. Subsequently, a U.S. airborne force dropped behind Aggressor lines and forced an Aggressor withdrawal to the Myrtle Beach-Charleston beachhead line.
- (2) Second St. Lawrence Campaign. Simultaneously with the Carolina operation, Aggressor forces launched a major offensive west and southwest along the St. Lawrence Valley. U.S. and Allied forces counterattacked and, by 28 February 1952, had pushed Aggressor back into his original lodgment area.

- (3) First Texas Campaign. On 24 September 1951, Aggressor made airborne and amphibious landings in Texas. In April 1952, the Aggressor drive was stopped in the vicinity of Fort Hood, Tex. After a battle in which both sides employed tactical nuclear weapons, Aggressor was forced to withdraw to the Gulf Coast. Most of the Aggressor forces were evacuated to Caribbean bases, but a strong force continued to hold a beachhead in the area south and northeast of Corpus Christi.

e. CAMPAIGNS OF 1953-55.

- (1) Northwestern United States Campaign. In early March 1953, Aggressor launched a successful amphibious attack against the west coast of the United States. By late September 1953, Aggressor occupied the states of Washington, Oregon, and California. Aggressor continued his advance until December 1953, and then was forced to retreat. He finally evacuated all forces in March 1954, except those in the California area.
- (2) Second Texas Campaign. In early 1954, Aggressor resumed the offensive in order to effect a linkup between his invasion force in west Texas and the force in the Corpus Christi beachhead area. U.S. forces frustrated this effort and subsequently launched a counter-offensive which forced Aggressor to order a general withdrawal into his lodgment areas.
- (3) Third Carolina Campaign. In April 1954, the Aggressor High Command launched an attack from positions in the Carolina lodgment area to capture nuclear manufacturing and storage installations in the Carolinas. After two months of fighting, Aggressor was driven back to his Carolina beachhead.
- (4) Southern Liberation Campaign. Turning his attention from the American theater, Aggressor in May 1954 attacked the nations south of the homeland. This operation, known as the "Southern Liberation Campaign," was launched on the pretext that the security of the Aggressor nation had been endangered and its national honor violated. Army Groups West and East conducted a two-pronged offensive, which resulted in victory over the opposing forces. The presence of the Aggressor army in the subjugated nations enabled native Circle Trigonists to seize top governmental positions and request annexation by and incorporation into the Aggressor nation as satellite states. Once the annexed territories had been pacified, occupation forces were withdrawn. In their place, a new army group, Army Group South, was established to command the armed forces in the new territories and to conscript and train recruits from these areas.

- (5) Third Texas Campaign. In 1955, Aggressor again made several attempts to enlarge his occupied areas in the United States. The most successful of these was the expansion of the Texas beachhead to the north and northeast. Aggressor broke out of the Corpus Christi beachhead in January 1955, and by the end of the year, occupied the entire coastline of Texas and Louisiana.

f. CAMPAIGNS OF 1956. Central United States Campaign. In August 1956, Aggressor attempted to capture the industrial centers of the midwestern United States by launching a general offensive from the Texas-Louisiana lodgment area. By mid-November, Aggressor reached a line along the Republican and Kansas Rivers. In early December, U.S. forces launched a successful counteroffensive and by the end of May 1957, Aggressor had withdrawn into the Texas-Louisiana lodgment area.

g. CAMPAIGNS OF 1957-58.

- (1) First Defense of the Canal Zone. In May 1957, U.S. Forces made amphibious landings on the Atlantic coast of Panama and air-transported landings on the Pacific coast of that country.

These raids were successful in destroying Aggressor supplies and equipment, and in neutralizing staging areas for troops preparing for commitment in the continental United States.

- (2) Fourth Carolina Campaign. In late May 1957, U.S. forces attacked the Carolina lodgment area and compressed Aggressor forces into a small beachhead at Georgetown, S.C. On 15 July 1957, Aggressor launched an offensive, preceded by nuclear attacks, and made amphibious landings near Morehead City and Wilmington, N.C., Myrtle Beach and Charleston, S.C., Savannah and Brunswick, Ga. Aggressor succeeded in linking up the Carolina and Florida lodgment areas. On 27 September 1957, U.S. forces launched a coordinated counterattack against Aggressor. By mid-December, the Aggressor force had been forced to retire to the general area of the Carolinas which they had prior to May 1957.
- (3) Fourth Texas Campaign. On 20 June 1957, U.S. forces containing Aggressor in the Texas-Louisiana lodgment area resumed their attack and forced Aggressor to retreat southwest and south through Mexico into the Aggressor-occupied Panama Canal Zone. Aggressor tenaciously defended the Canal Zone; however, superior U.S. forces ultimately forced Aggressor to evacuate his battered units to the Antilles Islands. The recapture of the Panama Canal by U.S. forces caused Aggressor to shift his attention to the recovery of the Texas-Louisiana lodgment area and, at the same time, attempt to consolidate his holdings along the southeastern portion of the Atlantic Seaboard and the Gulf Coast. On 5 September 1957, he launched an offensive westward from the Carolina lodgment area. Sweeping across the states of the Old South, he captured large segments of the Gulf Coast westward to Galveston-Houston. On 20 April, the U.S. forces, spearheaded by an armored combat command, launched a counteroffensive which cut off Aggressor elements in Texas. Aggressor forces under attack in the northern part of Louisiana were forced to withdraw across the Mississippi River. By 2 May, these Aggressor forces had been contained generally east of the Mississippi and south and southwest of a line embracing Paducah and Louisville, Kentucky-Knoxville, Tennessee-Atlanta and Savannah, Ga. A large U.S. force remained in southern Alabama and was resupplied by sea. The Aggressor forces cut off in Texas were reinforced with units from the Antilles and began expansion of the lodgment area. By July 1958, Aggressor succeeded in recapturing the original Texas-Louisiana lodgment area and pushed inland to the vicinity of Waco, Tex.

- (4) Second Northwestern United States Campaign. During the latter part of 1957, Aggressor attempted to secure a strong foothold on the Northwest Pacific Coast by launching an invasion of Washington State from the chain of islands along the west coast of Canada. By 4 May 1958, Aggressor, aided by Nerono nuclear rockets, was able to seize several airbases in Washington. U.S. forces began an immediate counterattack and contained Aggressor at the Columbia River. By 15 May 1958, Aggressor had been driven back to his original base of operations. Subsequently, he evacuated the islands and returned the bulk of his forces to the homeland. Small contingents were transferred to the Aleutian Islands.
- (5) Second Alaskan Campaign. On 21 January 1958, Aggressor launched airborne nuclear attacks against Seattle, McChord Air Force Base, Elmendorf Air Force Base, Fort Richardson, and Ladd and Eielson Air Force Bases. On 22 and 23 January, Aggressor airborne units seized Fairbanks, Ladd Air Force Base, and Eielson Air Force Base. On 29 January, a reinforced airborne brigade departed from Fairbanks and proceeded along the Alaskan Highway in a southeasterly direction. South of Big Delta, this brigade encountered a reinforced U.S. battle group. After consolidating, the U.S. force counterattacked. Aggressor was confronted with inadequate logistical support and was forced to withdraw. By the end of February 1958, Aggressor had been driven from the Alaskan mainland and retired to his lodgment areas in the Aleutian Islands.

- (6) Central European Campaign. No major campaigns had been fought in Europe since the Southern Liberation Campaign. During a 3-year unofficial armistice, Aggressor had been able to build up his forces in the homeland in addition to augmenting his embattled forces overseas. Concurrently with stepping up the tempo of his offensives in the American Theater, Aggressor decided to drive the United States and its Allies from the continent. In January 1958, an Aggressor offensive in western Europe accompanied by nuclear missile attacks compelled Allied forces to conduct a general withdrawal. On 15 May 1958, Allied forces employing numerous nuclear weapons launched a counteroffensive that drove Aggressor back to the original line of departure. Heavy casualties rendered both forces incapable of further offensive action.
- (7) Second Tennessee-Kentucky Campaign. While elements of the Aggressor forces retreated across the Mississippi, during the Fourth Texas Campaign, U.S. forces north of the Ohio River prepared to attack south. On 26 April 1958, an airborne assault was launched on the Clarksville-Fort Campbell area. United States objectives were to capture the important communications center of Clarksville, capture Aggressor guided missile sites at Fort Campbell, and consolidate in the area preparatory to a linkup with other U.S. forces advancing south from the Ohio River line. The linkup was effected on 21 April. By 10 May, Kentucky was free of Aggressor troops and a deep U.S. salient had been driven into Tennessee.

- (8) Middle Atlantic Coast Campaign. In order to relieve the pressure on his forces, Aggressor, on 15 May 1958, initiated two amphibious and airborne assaults along the Eastern Seaboard. By 17 May, both the Norfolk-Portsmouth area and the Charleston area had been seized. U.S. forces were able to stop Aggressor's westward movement by 20 May 1958. Subsequently, a counteroffensive was launched by U.S. forces that pushed Aggressor eastward to the coast. Aggressor succeeded in maintaining his forces within the confines of the original Carolina lodgment area, but evacuation of his forces at Norfolk-Portsmouth to the St. Lawrence area became necessary. Subsequently, Aggressor forces in Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia were destroyed or driven back into the Florida lodgment area.

h. CAMPAIGNS OF 1959.

- (1) Second Invasion of Panama Canal Zone. On 15 February 1959, Aggressor bombarded military installations in the Canal Zone with nuclear and conventional weapons, and Aggressor Naval Rifle troops launched an amphibious invasion that secured a beachhead in the vicinity of Rio Hato, Panama. Aggressor continued his advance toward the Canal Zone and was not halted until a STRAC force arrived to bolster U.S. defenses. Shortly thereafter U.S. Forces assumed the offensive and destroyed the Aggressor invasion force. Aggressor personnel able to evade capture escaped to the jungle or took refuge in homes of Circle Trigon party members and Aggressor sympathizers.
- (2) Second Southeastern Asia Campaign. During the period 1951-53 Aggressor consolidated his gains in this area by massing large stocks of military equipment and training his satellite armies in each of the subjugated nations. All democratic elements were ruthlessly purged and a massive propaganda campaign initiated in an attempt to induce the people to willingly accept Aggressor domination and leadership. In August 1953, a major guerrilla campaign, using both Aggressor and satellite forces, was opened in Malaya and the Philippine Islands to overthrow the established governments and subvert these countries to the Aggressor cause. With assistance from the United States and other nations, this campaign was defeated after years of conflict, and in 1959 Aggressor withdrew to press his attack in other countries.

- (3) Third Alaskan Campaign. Following Aggressor's withdrawal to the Aleutian Islands lodgment area in February 1958, action was initiated to refit and train for future operations on the mainland. During December 1958, Aggressor airborne elements assaulted the Fairbanks, Ladd AFB and Eielson AFB area and established an airhead. In late January 1959, Aggressor launched an attack along the Alaskan Railroad in an effort to seize the Fort Richardson-Elmendorf-Anchorage complex. In mid-February 1959, Aggressor forces encountered a reinforced U.S. battle group in the vicinity of Talkeetna-Sunshine-Montana, and after heavy fighting were compelled to retreat to the protection of the Ladd-Eielson airhead. Replacements and equipment were received from the Aleutians and in the fall of 1959, Aggressor airborne elements launched a ground attack from the airhead against Big Delta and Fort Greeley. Previously prepared positions in the vicinity of Tok Junction and Rapids enabled U.S. forces to eventually contain the Aggressor offensive.
- (4) Third Northwestern United States Campaign. Simultaneously with the Alaskan offensive an airborne assault was made in the Lethbridge, Alberta area, and subsequently an airhead was established. After consolidating his positions Aggressor launched a drive southward, and by 28 April, had advanced as far as Spokane, Wash. The Aggressor force crossed the Columbia River at Wenatchee and Vantage, proceeded south and captured Ellensburg, Wash. On 9 May, Aggressor encountered U.S. forces in defensive positions in the Yakima, Wash. area. On 21 May, U.S. forces launched a counterattack. This, coupled with his inability to maintain his supply lines along the ALCAN Highway, caused Aggressor to withdraw northward into British Columbia by the end of May 1959.

- (5) Second Balkans Campaign. Following the successful conclusion of its "Southern Liberation Campaign" in 1955, Aggressor spent 4 years consolidating gains in Southeastern Europe. A series of bloody purges in the annexed nations destroyed most of the surviving democratic leaders, while Army Group South carefully trained large satellite armed forces. Although minor clashes between NATO and Aggressor forces had commenced along their common border in mid-1957, military campaigns in other theaters prevented either side from committing the forces necessary to achieve a decisive victory in this area. In May 1959, Aggressor trained satellite forces launched a series of strong attacks supported by nuclear and chemical weapons, in an attempt to seize the northeastern coastal area of the Mediterranean Sea. Extensive use of guerrilla units led by fanatic Circle Trigon party members created serious problems in the Allied rear areas, and it wasn't until July that NATO forces were able to halt the satellite armies. In early August, allied forces counterattacked and by 20 January 1960 had succeeded in regaining all of the lost territory. At this point stiffening enemy resistance and continued guerrilla attacks against extended supply lines prompted the Allies to discontinue their advance and consolidate their forces generally along the original border.

- (6) Second Middle Atlantic Coast Campaign. In an attempt to prevent the United States from reinforcing its NATO allies in Central and Southeastern Europe, Aggressor made two amphibious attacks against the North Carolina coast during the summer of 1959. Screened by a northbound hurricane which seriously damaged and scattered U.S. coastal naval forces, Aggressor naval infantry (marines) landed at Pamlico Sound on 22 May and drove inland to seize Raleigh, N.C. A U.S. airborne assault into the beachhead on 6 June forced an Aggressor withdrawal to the line Washington-New Bern. To relieve pressure on the forces contained in the beachhead, Aggressor on 1 August 1959, landed a second naval infantry force in the Wilmington, N.C. area. U.S. forces were able to halt the Aggressor advance at all points by 5 October. On 26 October and 6 November airborne assault landings were made behind the Aggressor front by two U.S. divisions and on 13 November Aggressor began withdrawing eastward. The battered remnants of both Aggressor forces were evacuated to the Florida lodgment area during the remainder of that month.
- (7) Second Central European Campaign. As part of an overall strategic plan to prevent NATO from shifting reserves to the Balkan area, Aggressor went over to the offensive on 26 August 1959. Preceded by heavy nuclear and toxic gas attacks, Aggressor marched westward but was halted by strong Allied defensive systems on 21 September. NATO forces immediately launched a series of counterattacks and by 14 October, had driven Aggressor back to the original line of departure. Both forces suffered very heavy casualties from the counterexchange of nuclear weapons and were rendered incapable of continued offensive operations for a protracted period because of extremely severe materiel losses.

i. CAMPAIGNS OF 1960.

- (1) Fourth Alaskan Campaign. In late January 1960, Aggressor launched an assault on U.S. elements in the Rapids area. On 10 February 1960, Aggressor was opposed by reinforced battle group in the vicinity of Lake Louise. Aggressor subsequently withdrew to the Delta Junction area, occupying previously prepared defensive positions protecting the approaches to the Fairbanks-Ladd-Eielson airhead. Both U.S. and Aggressor forces suffered heavy personnel losses in this operation as a result of combat and severe weather conditions, thus temporarily halting offensive action.
- (2) Third Panama Canal Zone Invasion. Aggressor still considered the Panama Canal as an important objective in his military strategy. In early March 1960, Aggressor launched an attack into Panama. Only light resistance was encountered by Aggressor until he reached the Rio Hato area where STRAC and South American reinforcements halted the Aggressor offensive. By mid-March, the outnumbered Aggressor force was compelled to retreat to the northwest to the Antilles Islands.
- (3) Second California Campaign. On 26 February 1960, Aggressor launched an offensive to the south from his California lodgment area to capture the San Diego port facilities and thereby enlarge the lodgment area. By 11 March, Aggressor armor had advanced to a line running generally through San Fernando-Muroc Lake-Las Vegas. On 13 March the U.S. forces launched a strong counter-offensive employing small yield nuclear weapons and chemical agents. Aggressor initiated a delaying action and began a general withdrawal to the lodgment area which extended from Mendocino on the north to Long Beach on the south, and inland to a depth of 50 to 150 miles.

- (4) Fourth Northwestern United States Campaign. The Aggressor High Command gave high priority to the reinforcement of Army Group KOLOMBIO following its withdrawal into British Columbia in May 1959, and by December had made good all losses of personnel and equipment. In close coordination with the mid-January 1960 attack against U.S. Forces containing the Aggressor airhead near Fairbanks, Alaska, Army Group KOLOMBIO simultaneously drove southward from its lodgment area to seize the Seattle-Tacoma industrial complex. By early April, Aggressor had crossed the Washington border and on 7 May 1960, seized bridgeheads on the southern bank of the Columbia River at Wenatchee and Hanford. Initial U.S. counterattacks to destroy the crossing sites were unsuccessful and the American forces withdrew slowly toward defensive positions in Yakima, Wash. area. On 21 May 1960, U.S. forces launched a counteroffensive which, coupled with extended Aggressor supply lines and the gaining of air superiority by the U.S. forces, forced Aggressor to retreat northward into the British Columbia lodgment area by July 1960.
- (5) Third St. Lawrence Campaign. The long period of inactivity along the "forgotten front" was shattered on 29 April 1960 when violent Aggressor attacks breached U.S.-Canadian defensive positions and permitted strong enemy tank forces to drive southwest toward Montreal and up-state New York. Moving rapidly through the St. Lawrence valley, Aggressor armored units bypassed the strong Montreal defenses and on 3 May, had penetrated to the vicinity of Watertown, N.Y. On 9 May 1960, a U.S. task force driving northward from the Lake Champlain area to relieve the Allied garrison surrounded at Montreal, threatened Aggressor lines of communication to the Watertown area. This threat, together with a strong counterthrust by the American force defending the Camp Drum-Watertown area forced Aggressor into a general withdrawal from the St. Lawrence valley. By the middle of August 1960, U.S. and Canadian forces were again disposed along the positions from which they had been driven 4 months earlier.

- (6) Fifth Texas Campaign. Following the termination of the Fourth Texas Campaign in July 1958, Aggressor regrouped and retrained all elements of Army Group GOLFO. Action was also begun on the construction of permanent defensive positions in great depth along all avenues of approach into the lodgment area. This activity was hurriedly curtailed during the early spring of 1960 as word of Aggressor repulses filtered in from the northwestern and northeastern lodgment areas. Aggressor attempted to relieve pressure on his heavily engaged forces in the Washington and New York state areas by unleashing an armored task force northward along the Waco-Dallas axis at dawn on 1 May 1960. U.S. armor slashed viciously into the flanks of Aggressor tank columns and by 6 May, all Aggressor advances were halted. On 12 May a U.S. counteroffensive was begun to cut off the reeling Aggressor task force and 3 days later had encircled it. Aggressor made several attempts to relieve the surrounded force but all attempts were smashed and on 28 May 1960, the surviving remnants capitulated. All other Aggressor forces then withdrew behind the massive defensive positions along the Texas-Louisiana lodgment area front.
- (7) Fifth Carolina Campaign. In an attempt to regain the initiative following successive defeats in the St. Lawrence, the Texas and the Northwestern campaigns of 1960, Aggressor launched a series of spoiling attacks from positions in the Carolina lodgment area against adjacent American strongpoints and troop concentrations, which had been established in preparation for a major U.S. effort to reduce the Aggressor lodgment area. The first of these began on 3 July 1960 in the direction of Wilmington, N.C. This was followed by a second attack two days later toward Augusta, Ga., and a third on 10 July oriented at Charlotte, N.C. American reinforcements counterattacked and by 20 July, the situation had stabilized in this area and Aggressor was on the defensive. On 15 August successive American counterattacks reduced the last Aggressor salients and restored the original FEBA.

- (8) Third Balkans Campaign. The conflict between Aggressor and Allied forces continued throughout 1960. During this period the Allies launched an offensive, and despite intensive resistance, the Aggressor satellite army was forced to withdraw north of the Danube River by December 1960. During the withdrawal, guerrilla force cadres were either left behind or air-dropped to organize an effective guerrilla force for employment with the planned Aggressor counteroffensive to regain the lost territory. Allied supply convoys were ambushed, communications routes harassed, and supply dumps raided to provide the guerrillas with arms, ammunition, and explosives. Guerrilla units also worked in close coordination with the Aggressor Air Force and provided intelligence which enabled Aggressor to inflict heavy damage on troop concentrations, fuel storage areas and other supply installations. During this period, Aggressor Army Group SUDO was directed to undergo a complete reorganization in order to conform to the new Aggressor concept of nuclear warfare. At the completion of the reorganization, Army Group SUDO was to assume responsibility for the Balkans front and to relocate the satellite army forces in defensive positions along the Meridional mountain range.

j. CAMPAIGNS OF 1961.

(1) (a) With the end of Aggressor's campaigns against the United States in August 1960, an undeclared "cease fire" developed between the two nations along the borders of the lodgment areas on the North American continent. Within the lodgment areas Aggressor constructed fortifications in depth and attempted to develop a totalitarian form of civil government, led by the Circle Trigon Party. Secret overtures to the United States and Canada were also made by Aggressor for the overt purpose of reaching some type of accord which would limit military operations while the nations attempt to recover from the result of many years of warfare. This political activity met with only moderate success and after prolonged negotiations resulted in the establishment of several small, nominally independent, buffer nations in the territory adjacent to the Aggressor-occupied areas in British Columbia (Canada) and Texas-Louisiana. In each area, two or more nations were created, one on each side of a portion of the line of contact.

(b) In the northwest, the emergent nations were Cedonia, friendly to the United States, and Malo, a satellite of Aggressor. In the southern area, three countries initially developed, Freeland, Neutralia and Tigeria, the latter also an Aggressor satellite. In addition, a tiny principality, the Duchy of Dudland, was created within the borders of Freeland because the inhabitants of the area could not agree on any firm policy of political alignment.

(c) Without exception, the national existence of each of these small states was short-lived. In part their rapid demise was caused by an inherent lack of economic resources, but the principal factor was the unstable political situation surrounding their development. Immediately after the creation of these countries, Aggressor violated her agreement to allow them a free and independent choice of government and initiated a carefully planned campaign of sedition, strikes, and sabotage designed to subvert them to Aggressor. In all cases, the agent used was the Aggressor-directed Circle Trigon political party. In December 1960, an attempted coup d'etat by the Circle Trigon Party divided Neutralia into two smaller nations along the former Texas-Louisiana border. The western half came under the complete domination of Aggressor and was renamed Durado, while the eastern part installed a democratic government and renamed itself Freelandia.

(d) Aggressor continued to violate her treaty obligations by secretly smuggling large amounts of small arms, artillery, tanks, and aircraft into her satellites. Through the use of "volunteers," military forces were rapidly trained which far exceeded that required to maintain internal order. And, as subsequent military campaigns demonstrated, Aggressor also provided limited amounts of chemical, biological, and nuclear weapons to assist Malo, Tigeria, and Durado in their aggressive attacks upon their respective neighbors, Cedonia, Freeland, Freelandia.

(e) At the same time, Aggressor continued to pour reinforcements of men and material into Europe, the Balkans and all of the oversea lodgment areas. Secret redeployment of major elements from Army Groups GOLFO and KOLOMBIO to other army groups was made possible through the security provided the southern and northwestern lodgment areas by the newly created buffer nations. Political machinations for "peaceful coexistence" within the United Nations also aided Aggressor by providing a degree of surprise when she again initiated hostilities in a renewed effort to achieve her goal of world domination through military conquest.

(2) Third California Campaign. At dawn 12 December 1960, Aggressor shattered world peace by launching a two-pronged offensive against the United States forces deployed along the periphery of the California lodgment area. Spearheaded by major tank elements one attack rolled in the direction of Las Vegas, Nev., while the other was directed toward Phoenix, Ariz. Both attacks were abetted by guerrilla operations against U.S. rear area installations. By 17 January 1961, continuous pressure compelled U.S. troops to fall back on a line Tecopa - Baker - Ludlow - Twentynine Palms-Brawley. On 21 February the U.S. forces opened a strong counter-offensive employing low yield nuclear weapons and chemical agents. Initial gains were limited, but progress improved as supply convoys intended for the California lodgment area were diverted by Aggressor to support campaigns in Alaska and the Balkans. On 1 April, Aggressor began a general withdrawal and by the end of the month had been driven back into his original lodgment area.

(3) Fifth Alaskan Campaign. Because of his inability to gain a foothold in the Fort Richardson-Elmendorf-Anchorage complex during the winter campaign of 1960, Aggressor withdrew into prepared defensive positions at Delta Junction to protect the southeastern approaches into the Fairbanks-Ladd-Eielson airhead. A major reorganization of the ground forces was made, with overall control transferred from Task Force Aleutians to the 7th Combined Arms Army. 7th Army was subsequently assigned to Army Group KOLOMBIO. At 1800 hours on 8 February 1961, Aggressor moved southward along the Richardson Highway through the Gulkana River valley to cut the Glenn Highway in the vicinity of Tolsona Lake and then drive southwest toward the Anchorage area. On 9 February, a reinforced U.S. airborne battle group intercepted Aggressor as he attempted to cross the West Fork of the Gulkana River. Rapid reinforcement of U.S. forces from units containing the northwestern lodgment area forced Aggressor to abandon his attack in mid-March 1961, and withdraw into the strong defensive positions protecting his airhead. Continuation of the U.S. counteroffensive to destroy the airhead was precluded because of the necessity to redeploy major reinforcing elements to meet Aggressor offensives in the California, Northwestern, and Central European areas.

(4) Third Central European Campaign. The stabilization of the situation along the Western Front resulting from Aggressor's repulse in late 1959 enabled Aggressor to regroup and re-equip his badly mauled forces. The buffer zone which was established between the opposing forces also served as a screen behind which Aggressor was able to secretly prepare for a new offensive. On 6 March 1961, Aggressor violated the buffer zone and launched a surprise offensive westward toward the Rhine River, in conjunction with a massive submarine assault against Allied shipping and an invasion of the northwestern United States. NATO forces were alert however, and after small gains halted the Aggressor ground attack. The general stalemate on the ground reached by 6 April prompted Aggressor to increase the tempo of his nuclear and guerrilla attacks against the Allied support areas. Weapons delivered by missile and air struck at NATO logistical installations, but did not enable Aggressor to resume the offensive on the ground. At the same time, the Allied offensive which was launched on 9 March in the Balkans created near panic in the Aggressor homeland and caused Aggressor to redirect major reinforcements from the Central European front to the Balkans area. As a result, Aggressor was unable to develop sufficient force to make another major attack and went over to a defense on the Elbe-Salle River line. On 5 May 1961, NATO forces launched a counteroffensive which quickly regained the lost territory but then bogged down in the elaborate and highly developed frontier defensive system constructed by Aggressor during the two preceding years. By 20 June, NATO as a result of heavy casualties and small ground gains, and facing major attacks on the United States from the northeastern, northwestern and southern lodgment areas, abandoned the offensive and withdrew to her original positions along the buffer zone.

- (5) Fourth Balkan Campaign. In January 1961, Aggressor Army Group SUDO assumed responsibility for the front extending generally along the Danube River and began replacing satellite army units with Aggressor forces. Recognizing this as the prelude to a renewed offensive toward the Mediterranean Sea, NATO directed Allied Forces Middle East (ALFME) to launch an attack to coincide with the withdrawal of the satellite armies. On 9 March, the Allies crossed the Danube River on a wide front and drove northeastward catching Aggressor by surprise. Army Group SUDO suffered heavy personnel and equipment losses during the Allied offensive and was not able to mount a successful counteroffensive. This condition resulted in the Aggressor High Command's decision to replace Army Group SUDO. In early September, as the Allied forces approached the Sireuit River, Army Groups ORIENTO and NORDO were directed to replace Army Group SUDO in defensive positions east of the river. On 1 November 1961, COMALFME decided not to continue the offensive because of heavy battle losses and extended supply lines. Allied forces were directed to plan a defensive operation with the FEBA generally along the west bank of the Sireuit River. At dawn on 18 November, following an intensive nuclear and nonnuclear preparation, Aggressor launched a major offensive utilizing multiple crossing sites along the entire front. Closely coordinated with the attack, guerrillas initiated a major campaign to sever all Allied supply lines. These actions, coupled with major Aggressor offensives in Central Europe and the lodgments areas which prevented adequate supply and personnel reinforcement of the ALFME theater, forced the Allies to withdraw southward. The Aggressor advance continued, but at a slower pace as his supply lines lengthened, and his casualties mounted. On 3 July 1962, the front was finally stabilized along the old frontier with the huge losses incurred rendering both forces incapable of further offensive action.

- (6) Fifth Northwestern United States Campaign. By mid-March 1961, it became apparent to Aggressor that his attacks against the United States in California and Alaska had failed and that the Central European offensive was not progressing favorably. At the same time, the Allied drive in the Balkans was advancing in the direction of the Aggressor homeland, while the United States was rapidly preparing to launch an all-out effort to reduce the Aggressor airhead in the Fairbanks, Alaska area. In a state of near panic at the disastrous turn of events, the Aggressor High Command ordered every major oversea command to launch immediate offensives to reduce the pressure of the Allied attacks. Army Group KOLOMBIO responded by directing strong Aggressor armored elements eastward from the lodgment area through the U.S.-Canadian defensive areas which had been weakened to provide reinforcements for the intended offensive against the Aggressor airhead in Alaska, and south on the eastern side of the Cascade mountains. By 1 April 1961, Aggressor forces had driven south against Allied resistance to a line north of the Columbia-Spokane Rivers. On 15 April, Aggressor hit Spokane with a medium yield nuclear weapon, and on 2 May established bridgeheads west of the Columbia River in the vicinity of Wenatchee and Hanford. On 5 May, U.S. forces formed a solid defensive line and by 12 May had halted the Aggressor drive at all points. Five days later U.S. forces seized the initiative and opened a counteroffensive. By 22 May 1961, Aggressor was withdrawing rapidly to the north with his routes of communication under attack from U.S. and Canadian elements which had moved south from Alaska. On 6 June 1961, Aggressor withdrew into the lodgment area the last units which escaped encirclement and destruction.

- (7) Sixth Texas Campaign. In response to the High Command's directive to make an immediate attack upon the United States, Regional Command ATLANTIKO ordered Army Group GOLFO to strike westward from the Texas-Louisiana lodgment area in an attempt to linkup with the Aggressor forces making the attack eastward from the California lodgment area. The attack was poorly coordinated, and due to heavy rains which caused flash flooding on all major routes, did not begin until 17 May 1961, two weeks after the California offensive had ground to a halt and begun its recoil westward. Electronic intercepts altered U.S. forces and a tank ambush, similar to the one executed during the Aggressor Fifth Texas Campaign in May 1960, was prepared. The task force was struck from three sides after a 50-mile advance and by 22 May had been surrounded. Five days later, on 27 May 1961, all elements had surrendered or been destroyed and the front reestablished.

- (8) Fourth St. Lawrence Campaign. At the same time that Regional Command ATLANTIKO ordered Army Group GOLFO to make its ill-starred attack to relieve Allied pressure on Aggressor, similar instructions were issued to Army Group ST. LAURENCO in the northeastern lodgment area. On 1 May 1961, a strong Aggressor force drove out of the lodgment area, and after heavy fighting in two columns up the St. Lawrence and Lake Champlain valleys. The natural defensive fortress of Montreal was again bypassed by the armored elements as it had been the previous year. On 17 May, a tremendous tank battle was fought in the vicinity of Watertown as Aggressor made a major effort to drive American forces from their defensive positions, and both nuclear and chemical warheads were freely exchanged. In the Lake Champlain region, an Aggressor guerrilla force severely harassed the U.S. forces by sabotaging communication routes and supply dumps. In all cases, Aggressor was unsuccessful in attaining his final objective and on 23 May, U.S. and Canadian forces launched a major counteroffensive which succeeded in rolling the major Aggressor elements back into the lodgment area by early July 1961. Shortly after having been driven from the Montreal area, Aggressor detonated an estimated 100 KT nuclear weapon over the city he had been unsuccessful in capturing during two campaigns. Destruction was almost absolute for the city and its defenders alike.

k. CAMPAIGNS OF 1962.

- (1)(a) During the winter of 1961-62, numerous border violations by Aggressor satellite agents and guerrilla groups were verified in the three small, democratically oriented nations which abutted the southern and northwestern lodgment areas. Arms smuggled across their borders were discovered in Cedonia, Freeland and Freelandia while anti-government propaganda attacks from clandestine radio stations within their territories, as well as from the satellite news media, markedly increased. Guerrilla bands, led by Malo, Tigeria and Durado agents began large-scale attacks against targets throughout the three democratic countries. At the same time a general forward displacement of satellite artillery and armor toward their borders was detected. Faced with external threats and menaced by internal strife, Cedonia, Freeland, and Freelandia were unable to cope with the guerrilla bands or to expand their armed forces sufficiently to adequately protect themselves from probable attack. Each country appealed to the United States for assistance, and in late 1961, U.S. Military Advisory Assistance Groups (MAAG's) were established within each nation to provide military training, planning, and logistical support.

- (b) On the political front, Aggressor appeared to honor the agreement reached in late 1961 between the Free World and itself which limited armed conflict and established the six small buffer states along parts of the line delineating the southern and northwestern lodgment areas. Vasily Krostychovic, nominally a co-equal member of the Triumvirate but actually dictator directing Aggressor's actions, proposed a Geneva summit meeting to "end the Balkan War and achieve peace." The talks opened on 4 January 1962, in an air of tension caused by Aggressor offensive military preparations and quickly collapsed when Krostychovic made demands coupled with threats which were unacceptable to the Free World. Both sides then made preparations for a resumption of general hostilities.
- (2) Sixth Alaskan Campaign. In an attempt to divert U.S. attention from the war preparations of his satellite nations, Aggressor launched an offensive from his airhead in the Fairbanks, Alaska area on 22 January 1962. Directed southeastward along the Alaskan Highway, Aggressor moved toward Tok Junction, while establishing a blocking position on the Richardson Highway in the vicinity of Rapids Roadhouse. By 12 February, heavy fighting was in progress at Lake George with Aggressor attempting to flank the northern end of the Allied front. On 22 February, a U.S. night attack caught Aggressor by surprise and permitted armor elements to drive northwest through the Tanana River valley to Granite Creek. Aggressor units north of the Alaska Highway were cut off while the blocking force at Rapids Roadhouse was forced to withdraw to Donnelly Dome. Subsequent attacks by U.S. and Canadian units drove Aggressor back into his original lodgment area by the end of March 1962.

- (3) Fourth Central European Campaign. By February 1962, Aggressor had increased his ground forces east of the Elbe River to two Army Groups, OKCIDENTO and SUDO. On 6 February 1962, following an intense artillery barrage of conventional and nuclear fires, Aggressor's entire front exploded into a general advance. Continuing pressure by Aggressor slowly forced the Allied armies to withdraw westward, but the liberal use of nuclear and chemical weapons, coupled with a retention of air superiority and a determined ground defense, brought the Aggressor advance to a standstill in late April. NATO forces opened a counteroffensive which, by early June, had forced a general retreat of Aggressor troops. A well executed counterguerrilla campaign severely restricted the operations of the Aggressor guerrilla brigades and inflicted heavy losses on them. By July 1962, the Allies regained their original positions along the western edge of the former buffer zone. Faced with the task of forcing a passage through the heavy defenses on the Aggressor side, and at the same time bolstering the Balkans front, the NATO powers decided to halt their offensive and revert to a defensive posture.

- (4) Sixth Northwestern United States Campaign. On Sunday, 25 March 1962, under the guise of "regaining their rightful territory," Malo invaded Cedonia. The United States JCS immediately directed USSTRICOM to establish a Joint Task Force (JTF) to assist Cedonia in repelling the Aggressor satellite attack. In spite of determined resistance by the weak Cedonia forces, Maloan armored elements drove steadily forward, and by 2 May, had seized a bridgehead over the Columbia River at Vantage. During this action, the first positive evidence was obtained of the presence of Aggressor "volunteers" in the Maloan armed forces. On 4 May, the JTF organized a defensive position in the Manastash-Saddle Mountains area, but a strong Maloan attack succeeded in penetrating the U.S. defensive positions by 10 May. A counterattack restored the FEBA on 12 May. A second major Maloan attack began 17 May, but withered under heavy air attacks from U.S. Air Force which had wrested control of the air from Aggressor. On 18 May, the JTF launched a counteroffensive which broke through the Maloan positions, drove northward, and by seizing the bridgehead at Vantage, cut off a major portion of the Maloan-Aggressor Army. Continuing their advance along the entire front, Cedonian and U.S. forces were able to prevent the Maloan-Aggressor Army from establishing a strong defensive position at any point and by 12 June, had driven the last invaders across the Cedonia-Malo border. At this point, the JCS ordered the offensive halted because of the military situation confronting the United States in other areas.

- (5) Seventh Texas Campaign. Eight days after the initiation of the Maloan attack against Cedonia, the Aggressor satellite nation, Tigeria, invaded Freeland. The United States JCS instructed USSTRICOM to establish a second Joint Task Force (JTF) in the southern lodgment area zone to assist Freeland. On 16 April 1962, in anticipation of a similar attack on Freelandia by Durado, the JCS expanded USSTRICOM's mission to include the defense of Freelandia. The 2 April invasion of Freeland by Tigeria quickly drove the defenders from their border defenses and on 6 April, the first contact between the U.S. and Tigerian forces occurred east of Lampasas, as Tigerian reconnaissance units probed eastward along Highway 190 toward Copperas Cove. On 8 April, Tigeria unsuccessfully attempted to smash through the U.S. defensive positions in the Shell and Manning Mountains areas, and at dawn on 14 April, the JTF unleashed a counteroffensive which drove the Aggressor satellite forces south of the San Saba River. To relieve pressure on her Tigerian satellite, Aggressor hastened military preparations by Durado, and on 2 May 1962, that Aggressor satellite seized bridgeheads on the east bank of the Sabine River in an unprovoked invasion of Freelandia. In general the Durado attack was contained along Highway 170, with the exception of one advance in the Kisatchie National Forest region. A JTF counteroffensive was launched on 14 May and regained all of Freelandia except the southern part, by the end of the month. Here masses of Aggressor troops "volunteered" to become "citizens" of Durado, and in a series of bloody engagements succeeded in establishing Aggressor control over that portion of Freelandia which had formerly been a part of the Texas-Louisiana lodgment area. On 15 June 1962, the "Triumvirate" announced that the peoples living in the nations of Malo, Tigeria, Durado, and southern Freelandia had "voluntarily requested incorporation into their respective Aggressor lodgment areas for protection from further attacks by the capitalistic warmongers." The statement concluded by saying that these satellite nations were now defunct, and that Aggressor had reestablished full control over the southern and northwestern lodgment areas. Following this announcement, the governments of Cedonia, Freeland, Freelandia, and the Duchy of Dudland requested annexation by the United States. On 4 July 1962, the President announced that these requests had been approved, and that the territories and citizens of these war-ravaged nations were again a part of their former states.

- (6) Sixth Carolina Campaign. Convinced that the satellite attacks would divert U.S. attention and strength from the other lodgment areas, Aggressor ordered Regional Command ATLANTIKO to launch a major offensive northward from the southeastern lodgment area to seize the United States capitol at Washington, D.C. On 5 August, Aggressor struck U.S. troop and supply concentrations in North Carolina with aircraft and missile delivered nuclear weapons. Rapid advances were made during the first few weeks and Aggressor was able to drive the U.S. forces back to the line Bristol-Danville-Norfolk by 1 September. Here strong defensive positions halted the Aggressor offensive, and the unexpected failure of the satellite attacks upset Aggressor's plans by permitting the redeployment of major U.S. combat units into the new battle zone. A series of counterattacks against weakened portions of the lodgment area frontier threatened to break through the massive defense positions Aggressor had prepared and cut off his attacking elements. On 15 October, Aggressor began a withdrawal southward, and by Christmas 1962, was again contained within his lodgment area defenses.

- (7) Third Southeastern Asia Campaign. Following his failure to overthrow the governments of Malaya and the Philippine Islands in the 1953-59 guerrilla campaign, Aggressor concentrated on further exploitation of the enslaved countries within his lodgment area. Increased emphasis was given to the training of guerrilla cadres, and the satellite armies were provided with more modern equipment. In early 1962, Aggressor and satellite forces infiltrated into South Vietnam, Cambodia and Burma to assist certain dissident, indigenous leaders in overthrowing the lawful governments of these countries. The Southeast Asian Treaty Organization (SEATO) nations responded to this challenge by providing military equipment, training advisors and economic assistance to the threatened governments. By late 1962, headway had been made in defeating the Aggressor-directed guerrilla attacks, but the overall situation gave little assurance of being rapidly resolved.

Conducted extensive training exercises, in addition to performing occupation duties in 1956 and 1957. Components of the Army Group seized several strategic areas during the Middle Atlantic Coast Campaign, but were forced to withdraw by superior U.S. forces to the St. Lawrence area. In mid-1958, Army Group East (Forward) rehabilitated its subordinate elements. In February 1959, with its major elements at full strength, Army Group East (Forward) planned a limited objective operation to enlarge and strengthen the St. Lawrence lodgment area. In early March 1959, a surprise attack was launched southwest from the original lodgment area. The outnumbered U.S. and Canadian forces were compelled to yield ground until reinforcements arrived. Therefore, within a few days, Aggressor was able to secure the area extending as far southwest as Portland, Maine, and Quebec, Canada. The reinforced U.S. and Canadian forces succeeded in holding Aggressor northeast of a line between these two key cities. On this line Aggressor prepared extensive defense positions to retain the newly captured territory as part of his lodgment area. In March 1959, the St. Lawrence lodgment area consisted of Newfoundland, Anticosti Island, Nova Scotia and adjacent islands, New Brunswick Province, a portion of Quebec Province, and the northeast half of the State of Maine. Army Group East (Forward) was reorganized and redesignated Army Group ST. LAURENCO in March 1960. Subordinate to Regional Command ATLANTIKO.
